One of the most beautiful locations in Russia, Baikal lies 40 miles east of Irkutsk, a 395-mile-long, half-moon shaped fresh water reservoir. Lake Baikal contains one fifth of the world's fresh water, enough to supply all the world's fresh water requirements for forty years. So large is Baikal that it has its own weather and unique plant and animal life. Two thirds of the 2,000 species to be found here only exist in this part of the world. The surrounding taiga covered mountains plunging straight down to the water's edge enhance the crystal clear water of the lake.

Day 30, Fri, Jun 6                    Irkutsk • drive to Tulun (464km)

Head out of town, following the Angara River toward Tulun, 464 km. This drive will take about 6 hours. This is Siberia – the name we have heard since we were children – always associated with gulag camps and sub-zero freezing temperatures.

The journalist George Kennan, in his 1891 Siberia and the Exile System, wrote:

“You can take the whole of the United States...and set it down in the middle of Siberia without touching anywhere the boundaries of the latter’s territory; you can then take Alaska and all the countries of Europe, with the exception of Russia, and fit them into the remaining margin like the pieces of a dissected map. After having thus accommodated all this you will still have more than 300,000 square miles of Siberian territory to spare...an area half as large again as the Empire of Germany.”

Siberia is a huge region dotted with Soviet industrial towns and small villages, and dissected by the legendary Trans-Siberian Railway. The main purpose for the construction of the railway was to further the economic and social development of Siberia – the “sleeping” wild and pristine land.

Lunch is independent en route and dinner is at the hotel or a local cafe in Tulun on arrival.

Meals: B, D

Centralnaya Hotel or similar

This small hotel, located just outside of Tulun, sits at the banks of the river that gives the property its name. Decorated like a hunting lodge, the eight small houses that make up the compound give the place a rustic feel. A fitness room and banya are available for guests to use.

Hotel Safari Club or similar

The Siberian Safari Club is a small three star hotel located on the banks on the Yenesei River in Krasnoyarsk. This charming property has a large swimming pool, sauna, billiards, and a restaurant with a riverside terrace. The cozy rooms include all modern amenities.

Day 33, Mon, Jun 9            Krasnoyarsk

This morning enjoy a half day guided tour of Krasnoyarsk. A major industrial city of some 850,000 people, Krasnoyarsk was founded in 1628 on the Yenisei River and was first known as Krasny Yar, meaning "beautiful steep bank." It prospered during the 18th century as an important trading center on the Great Siberian Post Road and the Yenisei waterway. The railway reached Krasnoyarsk in 1896. During World War II many factories were evacuated from European Russia and rebuilt here.

Krasnoyarsk has always been associated with Russian exiles. In the early days the forts were replenished with troops from Europe who had been sent to Siberia instead of a jail sentence. In 1897 23% of the population was convicts. In the same year Lenin was exiled to Krasnoyarsk, joining Stalin, who was already in residence. When in power, Stalin founded one of his infamous Gulags in Krasnoyarsk.

A city tour of Krasnoyarsk begins in Peace Square featuring an excellent viewpoint of the Enisei River. After a visit to the Praskeva Chapel atop of Watch Hill continue on to the local Regional Museum of Krasnoyarsk, considered to be one of the best history museums in Russia.

In the afternoon board a public speedboat for a two-hour tour along the Enisei River, providing an opportunity to enjoy the wild and majestic scenery along the Enisei banks. Disembark from the vessel for a short promenade along the shoreline at Divnogorsk before returning back to Krasnoyarsk.

Lunch and dinner today are independent.

Meals: B

Day 34, Tue, Jun 10            Krasnoyarsk • drive to Tomsk (603 km)

Get an early start to begin the 603 km, 8 hour drive from Krasnoyarsk to Tomsk. Upon arrival check in to the hotel for a free evening.

Today ride to Novosibirsk. The driving distance is about 268 km and the drive will take about 3.5 hours. With a population of roughly 1.6 million, Novosibirsk is the largest city in Siberia, and its industrial and scientific center. Novosibirsk did not exist before the Trans-Siberian railway was built, growing up around the place chosen for the rail line's Ob River crossing. Nikita Khrushchev relocated his best scientists 30 km from here in 1959, in a special town built expressly for scientific research, called Akademgorodok, or Academy City.

Meals: B

Day 36, Thu, Jun 12 Novosibirsk

Visit the Regional Studies Museum. Founded in 1920, the Novosibirsk State Museum of Regional Studies' mission is to collect artifacts and information about Siberia's indigenous peoples, most of whom were still living in the old ways in 1920. Day 41, Tue, Jun 17 Ekaterinburg

Rest today, or take the tour. A morning tour of Ekaterinburg begins at the dam. Ekaterinburg grew up around the Plotinka Dam, which harnessed the water in the Iset River for the town's ironworks. The dam has been reconstructed twice, and now holds back the water in the City Pond at the heart of the city. Historical Square surrounds the pond, and on its edges are most of Ekaterinburg's museums.

The Black Tulip is a moving new monument. This statue of an exhausted and traumatized soldier is a memorial to the young men sent to fight in Afghanistan in the last years of Soviet power. Here in the square with its bubbling fountains is a corresponding memorial to the people who died and were injured in the war with Chechnya.

Continue on to the Church on the Blood, standing over the spot where Czar Nicholas II and his family were executed in July of 1918. The young family has been canonized by the Russian Orthodox Church, and declared martyrs, as holy passion-bearers, reverent believers who were tormented by the Soviets for their beliefs. The church was designed in the early 20th century Russian/Byzantine style that Nicholas favored, and completed in 2003.

A little over six miles from town is the mineshaft where the bodies of the last czar and his family were hidden after their execution. The place is called Ganina Yama, and today there is a monastery here. On the grounds of the new monastery, named the Holy Monastery of the Royal Martyrs Czar Nicholas and Family, are six wooden churches made without the use of nails, in the old-fashioned Russian way, to honor Nicholas and his family.

The afternoon and evening will be free for rest and independent exploration.

Nevertheless, structures in Gothic, baroque, Renaissance and Neo-Classical styles are still standing today. A city tour of Vilnius includes visits to the Cathedral, little St. Anne's Church, the Gates of Dawn and Vilnius University.

Vilnius' diminutive red brick St. Anne's church represents the pinnacle of Gothic architecture in Lithuania. Built around 1500, the building displays a remarkable 33 kinds of brick. The intricate combination and variety of arches, finials, brick patterns, and spires with metal crosses make for an elegant and graceful exterior. The interior has been renovated several times, and three baroque altars were included in the middle of the 18th century. The newer adjacent bell tower is neo-Gothic, designed in 1873 by a different architect. St. Anne's has survived more than five centuries almost unchanged, and stands today as the most famous building in Vilnius.

One of the original gates of 16th century Vilnius, the Gates of Dawn are one of the last remaining parts of the old city wall. At that time, city gates often incorporated holy icons to protect the city from invaders. The chapel in the Gates of Dawn is home to one of the most revered icons of Catholic Lithuania, the golden-clad Mother of Mercy.

Stefan Batory, King of Poland, established Vilnius University in 1579, and it developed into an important scientific and cultural center. One of the oldest universities in Eastern Europe, its buildings encompass all the major architectural styles that influenced Vilnius over 400 years. Moscow closed the university from 1832 to 1917, but today over 14,000 are students enrolled.

During World War Two, Königsberg was nearly destroyed by the Allied forces, and after the Soviets were awarded the region in 1945, they did not restore the evidence of its long Germanic past. It was renamed Kaliningrad in 1946 after Mikhail Kalinin, its recently deceased Soviet President. Because the Soviet Baltic fleet was headquartered here, Kaliningrad was closed to foreign visitors until 1991. It is still heavily militarized.
